New York City Apartment Resources

Demand for Mount Sinai owned housing is continually increasing. Since Mount Sinai owned apartments cannot accommodate everyone, many people find it necessary or preferable to seek housing in the surrounding area.

This guide is being provided to assist you in locating housing in the NYC boroughs.

Our contact information:
The Mount Sinai Health System
Real Estate Division
1249 Park Avenue, 1st Floor
New York, NY 10029
Phone: (212) 659-9630
Fax: (212) 831-3093
Email: housing@mountsinai.org

Note: Some management companies cannot be contacted directly. You may view our bulletin board in the Real Estate office for their regularly monthly updates. If an address is listed, you can visit their leasing office directly and if a web site is listed you may view their vacancies online.

New York City Apartment Resources

There are many resources that you can use to search for an apartment.

Here are a few useful links that may be a good starting point in your search.

Nyjournallnews.com Local Newspaper Listings

Nypennysaver.com The Local Penny Saver

Newyork.craigslist.org Craigslist

Hotpads.com Map based housing search

Trulia.com

Sublet.com – Includes both long and short term sublets

Homes.com

Rent-Direct.com

ApartmentSearch.com an apartment locator

ApartmentGuide.com an online version of the Apartment Shoppers Guide

Apartments.com a national apartment locator

Mynewplace.com Has millions of apartments for rent.

Streeteasy.com

To research the area you are considering:

ApartmentRatings.com apartment reviews by real people

Apartmentreviews.net apartment ratings and reviews by tenants

Many apartment seekers utilize a real estate broker in their apartment search, although with this list, you don't have to. Most brokers will require you to pay a brokers fee, typically 15% of your annual rent. That cost can be large for some. The best way to avoid paying a brokers fee is to avoid the broker altogether and go straight to the building management company. When you contact the landlords directly, you are not required to pay a fee.

We have included a list of no fee management companies in the area for your reference.

Mount Sinai assumes no responsibility in connection with any of these management companies or web sites and recommends that any information listed therein be independently verified.

Landlord Requirements of Prospective Tenants

Each landlord requires slightly different information from an applicant. As a general rule, most landlords require that the prospective tenant have an annual income equal to 40 - 50 times the monthly rent. For example, if your rent is $1,600/month, your salary would need to be $64,000 - $80,000/year in order to rent the apartment by yourself. Depending on the landlord, combined incomes for roommates or couples may be used. Outstanding loans, asset liquidation, credit and rent history are also taken into consideration. If you do not meet these criteria, a guarantor may be required. The guarantor must be financially able and qualified to pay your rent as well as comfortably carry his financial responsibilities in case you default on the lease (generally 80-100 times one month's rent). Many landlords require a tri-state (New York, New Jersey and Connecticut) guarantor and prefer a relative.

The following is a list of regularly required information:

Letter of Employment

(Usually a brief statement on employer's letterhead of annual salary, bonus, and position held, and start date. International customers will also want to have included the number of years, if any they worked for their current employer.)

Letter from Current Landlord

(This letter should reference length of tenancy and history of paying rent on time. If you cannot obtain a letter, bring the previous landlord's name, address, and phone number.)

Good Credit History

(If your credit is not in good standing or you have no US credit history, you may require a guarantor.)

Personal Identification

A Passport or Driver's License

Money (Usually in the form of certified checks) First month's rent, Security deposit, Application fees, other fees

Additional information you may wish to have available:

Copy of Recent Pay stubs Tax Returns

(Typically for two years prior)

Financial Statement

(A statement version should be acceptable)

Bank Letter or two months of statements

(Confirming status, balance of account(s), and date opened)

Two Business Letters of Reference

(Usually from former landlords or employers)

International

If you are a first time renter in New York and do not have a credit history in the United States, landlords might require an extra security deposit, and a guarantor or rent paid up front. Procedures and requirements may vary from one building to another.

Apartment Rental Dictionary

Alcove: A small separate space in an apartment, which can house a kitchen or bedroom arrangement.

Apartment: A rented space in either a building, house or flat. Apartments are rented with a lease, a legal contract stating the terms of the rental.

Brownstone/Townhouse: A four to six story building often constructed during, or in the style of, 1800's to early 1900's housing. They can be single-family homes or divided into apartments.

Condominium: A space that is purchased in a building, including an apartment and a percentage of the common living space in the building.

Condominium Lease: Similar to a rental lease, except the apartment has a private owner instead of a managed one. These can have more negotiable lease terms as only on owner is involved.

Convertible: An apartment with an extra alcove or room that could be converted into a bedroom. This is great for someone needing an office or someone who needs a child's room.

Co-operative (Also called co-op): A building owned by a cooperative apartment corporation. The corporation issues shares of its stock which are allocated to each apartment depending on the size and features. This means you don't own the actual space but rather a share in the corporation.

Duplex: Depending on the city, these can be a house divided into halves or a two-story apartment.

Elevator Buildings: Usually a six to twelve story building that uses an intercom or video surveillance system. They may or may not have a doorman and luxuries like a gym or pool.

Furnished Unit: An apartment that comes fully equipped with furniture and amenities. These units may be available for either a short or long term lease.

Loft: A big, open space (often a former commercial building) with high ceilings and large windows that has been converted into an apartment.

One Bedroom: An apartment that includes a bedroom, kitchen, bathroom and living area. A one-bedroom with a separate room not as big as the bedroom may be listed as a 1.5 bedroom, a junior four (four rooms), a flex two or a convertible two (two bedrooms).

Rental Lease: A legal document stating the dates, price rules and other stipulations for the rental agreement between an individual and a management company. Once signed, they are hard to break unless you have a serious problem as outlined in the document.

Studio or Efficiency: A one-room apartment with a separate bath, it can also have a separate kitchen area off to the side. Traditionally thought of as an artist's pad, the studio is a great choice for penny-pinchers and those who don't need a big space.

Sub-lease: Taking over a lease in a co-operative or rental apartment from the current tenant. The sublet renter usually shares responsibility for the apartment with the main leaseholder.

Two-bedroom: An apartment with two bedrooms and typically four, five or six total rooms. The bedrooms may have exact layouts or may vary greatly in size. There may be one main bathroom or a master bedroom and bath with another bathroom near the central living area.

Walk-up building: Usually the least expensive type of housing, these are four to five story buildings often constructed as multi-family housing.
